Pro Bono Volunteer, Asia/Africa

(Short Term Assignment)

Brief Description:

International Bridges to Justice (IBJ) is a non-governmental, apolitical, non-profit organisation dedicated to protecting the basic legal rights of ordinary citizens in developing countries. Every day, millions of people around the world are arbitrarily detained, tortured, and denied access to counsel. IBJ seeks to solve this problem within our lifetimes through the systemic provision of early access to competent legal representation for those arrested and accused of a crime. Early engagement with competent counsel ensures that individuals will be protected against investigative torture, prolonged detention, and other due process violations. In recognition of the UN SDG 16, IBJ champions access to justice as the ultimate means to stable and fair judicial processes, healthier economies, and more secure societies. To this end, IBJ seeks professionals with significant experience successfully managing, monitoring, and evaluating Rule of Law programs in countries with developing sociocultural and economic systems, as well as substantial experience practicing criminal defence law.

As the Pro Bono Volunteer, you will be responsible for IBJ's Asia/Africa program; you will play an integral role in implementing a program designed to prevent human rights abuses and advocate for the protection of due process rights for the criminally abused resulting in greater access to justice for all.

About IBJ:

International Bridges to Justice (IBJ) is a non-governmental, apolitical and independent non-profit organisation based in Geneva, Switzerland. Every day, millions of people around the world are arbitrarily detained, tortured, and denied access to counsel. IBJ seeks to solve this problem within our lifetimes through the systemic provision of early access to competent legal representation for those arrested and accused of a crime. IBJ works bottom-up to support defenders and improve standards, and top-down to shift mind-sets of legal stakeholders and produce lasting policy change. Early engagement with competent counsel ensures that individuals will be protected against investigative torture, prolonged detention, and other due process violations. In recognition of the UN SDG 16, IBJ champions access to justice as the ultimate means leading to stable and fair judicial processes, healthier economies, and more secure societies.

We operate 8 country programs in Burundi, Cambodia, China, D.R.C., India, Myanmar, Rwanda and Zimbabwe, and have 69 JusticeMakers fellows in 42 countries, spread across six continents.

IBJ Asia/Africa Pro Bono Volunteer Position:

IBJ has a longstanding commitment to fostering sustainable change in the legal systems of Asia/Africa. However, the need for qualified defence lawyers remains, as the poor and indigent in the region continue to suffer systematic human rights and due process abuses.

IBJ is recruiting a Pro Bono Volunteer to help expand the reach of these operations. The Pro Bono Volunteer will work on a short-term basis to assist in implementing the Asia/Africa program designed to prevent human rights abuses and advocate for the protection of due process rights for the criminally accused. Applicants should be fierce advocates with demonstrated commitment to protecting basic legal rights for the poor and indigent. IBJ seeks professionals with experience in Rule of Law programs in countries with developing sociocultural and economic systems, as well as experience practicing criminal defence law.

The Pro Bono Volunteer will assist in Asia/Africa-wide program implementation, and project reporting of all IBJ Asia/Africa programming and training activities. In coordination with Geneva HQ, the Pro Bono Volunteer will assist in setting the annual Asia/Africa programming/training plan and budget. This role will act as an external representative of IBJ in communication and programming matters, and motivates IBJ lawyers, interns, and other volunteers to accomplish objectives.

Program activities will seek to:

1. Improve access to justice and legal aid for the poor and vulnerable; and
2. Develop legal capacity of justice sector professionals in Asia/Africa.

The focus of this position is on Asia/Africa and will require frequent travel throughout the region.
