ENQUIRY DESK

The desk is staffed by skilled librarians who are there to help you with enquiries in person, by telephone or email. Regular tours are offered to provide an introduction to the Library. Additionally, librarians can assist with specific enquiries and there are a range of specialist resources available that provide advanced guidance regarding research skills in a particular subject or jurisdiction.

LEGAL RESEARCH TRAINING

The Library provides regular legal research training sessions, which can also be booked as one-to-one sessions. In the future, we will be offering free online tutorials in searching free legal databases such as EUR-LEX and HUDOC, as well as subscription databases such as Lexis and Westlaw. Members can enquire regarding other opportunities for remote training.

Textbooks may be borrowed an hour before the library closes and returned the next working day by 10.00 am.
LIBRARY HISTORY

The Library is known to have existed prior to 1540 as archive records show, but was re-founded in 1641 when Robert Ashley (1565-1641) bequeathed his collection of books to the Inn. At that time the four Inns were commonly regarded as the third university of England and, as well as providing instruction in the law, they also provided members with a gentleman’s education which encompassed divinity, philosophy, arts and sciences.

Since then, the Library has been housed in various places around the Inn, including what is now the Parliament Chamber. A new library was built and opened in 1861 by the then Prince of Wales; it stood across the garden from the present building. That building was destroyed in 1941 following an incendiary attack. Fortunately, the Molyneux Globes had already been sent out of London for safe-keeping, and the majority of the books were saved.

Following the war the collections were housed temporarily in two prefabricated houses in Brick Court. The present building, designed by Sir Edward Maufe, was opened in 1958 by the Queen Mother. Today the library houses over 250,000 volumes.

ACCESS

Wheelchair ramp to the building entrance
Automated building entrance doors
Lift to all floors
Mezzanine floor in basement is not wheelchair accessible, but staff can retrieve material
Wheelchair accessible toilets on ground floor
Public computer terminals with touch-screen monitors
A portable hearing loop, magnifier and headphones available at the Enquiry Desk
The Library subscribes to an extensive range of major titles and holds old editions in the basement. English and International law textbooks are located on the main floor and are arranged by subject according to the Moys Classification Scheme for law. The catalogue will give Moys classmark, for example KM 587 BAN. Guides to using Moys can be found in the Library. The Common Law Series and City Law School manuals are kept in the Enquiry Area.

Although the Library has material on all areas of UK law, each of the Inns' libraries has subject concentrations. Some of the topics covered at Middle Temple include employment, insurance and shipping law. A list of all subject specialities is provided on the last page of this guide. Each Inn library specialises in different jurisdictions: Middle Temple in EU & US law, Lincoln's Inn & Inner Temple in Commonwealth law, and Gray's Inn in...

LAW REPORTS

Most nominate reports are held, dating back to the sixteenth century, as well as all major modern titles and series for England and Wales. The Library subscribes to a range of specialist titles such as Building Law Reports, Criminal Appeal Reports, Lloyd's Law Reports and Local Government Reports. The collection is complemented by major digests and citators, as well as our database services.

EUROPEAN LAW

As one of its specialist collections, the Library holds an extensive range of EU law. As well as primary European Union material, there are laws for individual member states, judgments and decisions of the European Court of Justice, law reports, periodicals and textbooks. A small human rights collection is available along with the European materials, and includes several textbooks and reports covering UK, European and international law.
The Library specialises in Ecclesiastical law, with a good collection of divinity and canon law.

A range of journals is available to supplement the textbooks and law reports. The collection includes general publications such as Counsel, practical works such as The Criminal Law Review, and academic works such as The Cambridge Law Journal. A complete run of The London Gazette from 1665 to date is also available, with earlier volumes stored in the basement.

Progressing from its roots as a provider of general education to young gentlemen, the Inn has always maintained good collections of divinity and canon law. The library is a repository for the transcripts of the consistory courts, which have been bound into annual volumes. A consolidated index covering 1891 onward provides easy access to cases and is also available online through the website of the Ecclesiastical Law Society [www.ecclawsoc.org.uk].

A loan collection of legal biographies and trials is available on the gallery.

General reference works, such as legal directories, the Bar Directory, British National Formulary, The Expert Witness Directory, Dictionary of National Biography and the Oxford English Dictionary, are located on the main library floor.
.collections: basement

the library retains, wherever possible, all previous editions of textbooks; these are housed in the basement. there you will also find past editions of government publications such as hansard for the lords and commons, along with statutes, command papers and legal encyclopedias such as halsbury’s and atkin’s. the mezzanine level houses early us state reports, as well as international law, eu law, roman dutch law, biographical and historical materials.

collections: third floor-american the inn has always had strong connections with the united states, dating back to the earliest colonial settlers, and now holds one of the largest collections of us law outside of america. this comprehensive collection includes the national reporter series, uniform laws annotated, west’s digest and a good collection of text books. american law reports and journals are also available through heinonline, lexis.com and westlaw us.

commonwealth and international although material for the commonwealth is held by inner temple and lincoln’s inn, the library still collects several of the major series of reports including commonwealth law reports and new zealand law reports.

although international material is covered by gray’s inn, the library holds a modest collection of textbooks on international law (which are located on the first floor) as well as the international law reports and international litigation procedure (located on the third floor). many international journals are also available electronically through heinonline.

SIR LOUIS BLOM-COOPER FLOOR: RARE BOOKS

The Library holds a significant collection of antiquarian books dating back to the 13th century which is housed with the Archive in secure and environmentally controlled storage. It reflects the Library’s original purpose of informing members on diverse subjects including law, theology, travel, medicine and philosophy. Robert Ashley’s founding collection of 1641 contains many important works including books from John Donne’s library, as well as books owned by John Dee and Ben Johnson. The Library runs a sponsorship scheme for the restoration of rare books; further details are set out in a pamphlet available in the Library and on our website.

The Inn’s Archive contains administrative and financial records dating back to 1501 as well as manuscript material relating to its history and members. It offers secure viewing areas and also houses a conservation studio. Enquiries should be addressed to the Archivist: archive@middletemple.org.uk.

LEGAL RESEARCH: CASE LAW

A case citator will direct you to where a case has been reported if you know the names of the parties. Current Law Case Citator is comprehensive from 1947, and provides a complete list of citations in the index. To use this citator you must know the year of the case. The Digest, formerly the English and Empire Digest, includes historic cases but does not cite every case available. It is organised and searchable by subject, does not require you to know the year of the case, and covers Scottish, Irish, European and Commonwealth jurisdictions.

Halsbury’s Laws of England is a useful reference when looking for cases related to a particular subject. It aims to set out all the law, arranged by subject matter, and is an excellent starting point for researching an unfamiliar topic.

Subscription and free databases give access to many law reports and transcripts, and may host additional electronic-only titles. No single database is comprehensive, and not every law report has been digitised.

Electronic sources require different search techniques, and it can be useful to spend some time coming to terms with the idiosyncrasies of any database you use frequently. Generally, additional information on effectively using a database can be found under the help function or in the user guide.
To chose the correct report of a case available in more than one series, follow the Practice Direction: Citation of Authorities, [2012] 1 WLR 780, www.judiciary.gov.uk/publications-and-reports/practice-directions/2012.
LEGAL RESEARCH: EUROPEAN CASES

Decisions of the European Court of Justice and the General Court (formerly Court of First Instance) are reported in the European Court Reports. Roman numerals indicate volume numbers (I for the ECJ; II for the General Court).

Some European cases are reported in general English series, while a variety of additional European law reports such as the Common Market Law Reports or the All England Law Reports: European Cases are also available.

The European Court of Human Rights was created by the European Convention on Human Rights and functions under the auspices of the Council of Europe, rather than the European Union. ECHR cases are sometimes reported in various human rights series, but the official version is available in the Reports of Judgments and Decisions.

Many European law reports are available online. Westlaw, Lexis and Lawtel all include European resources, and several free databases are available from both the EU and the Council of Europe. For guidance on efficiently searching these sources see the additional information available on their websites:

EUR-Lex: eur-lex.europa.eu/content/help/pages/help-default.html
LEGAL RESEARCH: STATUTES

There is a complete run of Statutes at Large from earliest times until 1869, followed by Public General Acts from 1870 onward. These do not show whether an Act has been repealed or subsequently amended, nor do they necessarily reveal when it came into force. The practice of bringing whole or parts of a statute into force by ministerial order or SI may necessitate subsequent research, often in another source.

Halsbury's Statutes is constantly updated, re-issued from time to time, is comprehensive and authoritative. It is annotated by well-informed editors, usually addresses the issue of when a statute came into force, and whether it has subsequently been amended or repealed. It is important to keep abreast of repeals, amendments and other developments by using the annual supplements and loose-leaf releases provided with the main volumes when using this work.

STATUTE RESEARCH USING ENCYCLOPAEDIAS

Specialist loose-leaf encyclopaedias cover many individual subjects and may prove to be the best sources of up to date statute law. They are edited by specialists in their fields, and usually contain discussion of the legislation and references to cases decided under it. In addition, they often contain the texts of relevant delegated legislation, departmental circulars and other policy documents.

STATUTE RESEARCH USING DATABASES

Many databases carry all the statutes updated almost daily to reflect the law as it stands: amended and in force. However, providers reserve the right to remove material at their discretion and almost without notice. No single database is comprehensive and they do not provide consistent coverage of older or repealed legislative material.

The guides to searching specific databases will also provide assistance in searching for legislation, and every online database should include a help section or user guide.
Many print resources are accompanied by guides that detail how to use them to best effect. There are a selection of research guides available on the 1st floor.

In some cases you may wish to use a generic search engine such as Google to begin your research. It is always necessary to use such resources with caution by independently verifying the authority of all results.

To construct a more precise search in Google try the Advanced Search option [www.google.com/advanced_search]. There are also many alternative search engines such as DuckDuckGo [duckduckgo.com/] which does not track browser history, or WolframAlpha [www.wolframalpha.com/] which is computational.
