This day Mr Dowdeswell Mr Serjeant Vaughan Mr Pitcairn Mr Read Mr Athorpe Mr Warren and Mr Sturges were severally congratulated, and the thanks of this antient and honorable Society was given to Mr Prolocutor for his very able and eloquent speech on that occasion –

Same day Mr Serjeant Vaughan Mr Read Mr Pitcairn and Mr Warren paid each a bottle of wine on account of their education

[Signed] Gen: Wilson Secry

Same day the entry of the 6 May 1791 having been made by which it appeared that Mr Graves late a member of this Society on that day betted Mr Secretary a haunch of venison and a dozen of Claret that the slave trade would be abolished as far as Great Britain was concerned within the 18th Century, and a question having arisen whether the 18th Century is or is not expired, the society on account of the difficulty of the said question resolved that Mr Secretary with the approbation of Mr Graves do pay the said bet in the month of July next, if the slave trade shall not be then abolished, or so soon after as venison can be had, and that on payment as aforesaid Mr Secretary be discharged of the sd bet.

[Note: this appears to be an error as Mr Graves bet the slave trade would NOT be abolished within the century]

Sir

The antient and Honorable Society of the Bears having now received authentic information of your marriage congratulate you on the event. When they recollect how often your presence has animated their meetings and how much they are indebted to your very brilliant display of talent in prosecuting the office of Prolocutor they cannot but lament that any circumstance should prevent your continuing to be a regular member of the Society, but reflecting that your present arduous office of a married man may, and they confidently trust will promote the good of society at large by increasing its numbers, they submit to their private Esq with [Pateree?] And in testimony of their esteem have [ariced?] to enrol your name in the list of Honorary Members.
